Free Green Workshops for Staff and Students February, March and April 2017

Monthly green and traditional skills workshops hosted at Cardiff MET and run by Green City Events. Open to both staff and students, these workshops share skills and knowledge in fun, practical and engaging ways.

City Crops - Are you thinking of starting a small urban garden and growing some city crops? Whether you've got a patio, a window box or just a fence come and try some practical and fun ways to grow your own in the tiniest urban spaces.

Urban honey - If you're interested in beekeeping but not sure what's involved or how to get started then this workshop is for you!

Revive your clothes - Have you ever wondered who makes your clothes and how to make more ethical fashion choices? Then why not join us and revive your wardrobe!

Thank you for the opportunity to participate in the Bee keeping course. This was the first I have participated in any or the classes and hopefully not the last, this has opened my eyes to Bee Keeping and looking to start at home.

Just wanted to say how fantastic (sorry can't remember the lady's name) the speaker was...she has so much passion and experience. ...I was so excited about attending and was not disappointed. Thank you so much for organising this event.

The beekeeping event was so much more than a mere 'talk' – it was an education and an inspiration! Welcoming and pitched at a level suitable for all, the presenter introduced us to the noble common bee and the makeup of its home – the hive. Delivered in a relaxed yet informative fashion I walked away with a greater understanding of what it is to keep bees in an urban environment as well as the knowledge required to begin the process of beginning my own beekeeping journey – when I am ready! I cannot recommend this talk enough – irrespective of whether you would like to keep bees, if you find the natural world of interest you will love this worthwhile event. Thank you Cardiff Met!
